

Cable operators essentially operate monopolies and even though these are not an essential service it is certainly an ubiquitous one and so should open their networks to other ISPs. LECS should remain regulated and have to open their networks at fair rates.